

Lucy Berliner has delivered workshops on the treatment of PTSD and child abuse and received payment for doing so.

Jon Bisson is a member of the research team that developed a web-based guided self help programme to treat PTSD. The programme is likely to be marketed in the future. Royalties will be payable to Cardiff University, with a proportion of these being shared with the research team in line with Cardiff University's rules. He has also received grant funding from various sources for research related to PTSD and has received payment for lectures and workshops concerning PTSD. He has undertaken systematic reviews, meta-analyses, randomised controlled trials and other research in the traumatic stress field that may be referred to in the guidelines.

Catrin Lewis is a member of the research team that developed a web-based guided self help programme to treat PTSD. The programme is likely to be marketed in the future. Royalties will be payable to Cardiff University, with a proportion of these being shared with the research team in line with Cardiff University's rules. She has undertaken systematic reviews, meta-analyses, a randomised controlled trial and other research in the traumatic stress field that may be referred to in the guidelines.

Marylene Cloitre has received grant funding from various sources for research related to PTSD and has received payment for lectures and workshops concerning PTSD and Complex PTSD. She has undertaken reviews, randomised controlled trials and other research in the traumatic stress field that may be referred to in the guidelines. She has developed an intervention of skills plus exposure therapy for the treatment of complex presentations of PTSD and has published a workbook about treatment of the effects of childhood trauma that she receives royalties for.

David Forbes is Director of Phoenix Australia-Centre for Posttraumatic Mental Health. Phoenix Australia developed the Australian Guidelines for ASD and PTSD, provides training in evidence-based treatments on a fee for service basis and develops educational material for mental health practitioners. He has received grant funding from various sources for research related to PTSD and has undertaken reviews, randomised controlled trials and other research in the traumatic stress field that may be referred to in the guidelines.

Lutz Goldbeck is a Board member of the German Speaking Society of Psychotraumatology (DeGPT). The society is responsible for editing the German evidence-based guidelines for PTSD, which are currently under review. (He is not a member of the German guidelines committee.) He has undertaken systematic reviews, meta-analyses, randomised controlled trials and other research in the traumatic stress field that may be referred to in the guidelines and has received grant funding for some of this work.

Candice Monson has received grant funding from various sources for research related to PTSD and has received payment for lectures and workshops concerning PTSD, Cognitive Processing Therapy and Cognitive-Behavioral Conjoint Therapy for PTSD. She has undertaken systematic reviews, meta-analyses, randomised controlled trials and other research in the traumatic stress field that may be referred to in the guidelines. She has received a series of grants to investigate methods to disseminate Cognitive Processing Therapy (CPT) to clinicians throughout Canada and in the USA. She has published two books and receives royalties for these.

Stephen Pilling has delivered lectures and workshops on the development of clinical guidelines and received payment for doing so.

David Riggs has undertaken research in the traumatic stress field that may be referred to in the guidelines.

Neil Roberts is a member of the research team that developed a web-based guided self help programme to treat PTSD. The programme is likely to be marketed in the future. Royalties will be payable to Cardiff University, with a proportion of these being shared with the research team in line with Cardiff University's rules. He has also received grant funding for research related to PTSD and has undertaken systematic reviews, meta-analyses, randomised controlled trials and other research in the traumatic stress field that may be referred to in the guidelines.

Francine Shapiro developed Eye Movement Desensitization and Reprocessing (EMDR) as a treatment for PTSD and is Executive Director of the EMDR Institute. She has delivered presentations and workshops to various organizations on the development and treatment of PTSD and received payment for these. She has published books about EMDR therapy and the treatment of trauma and received royalties for these.

Miranda Olf has received grant funding from various sources for research related to PTSD and has undertaken research in the traumatic stress field that may be referred to in the guidelines. She has delivered presentations and workshops to various organizations on the development and treatment of PTSD and received payment for these. She is also Editor-in-Chief of the European Journal of Psychotraumatology (EJPT) for which she now receives a modest stipend and EJPT articles may be referred to in the guidelines.